Conor—

We want to provide an initial response to your question about individuals identified in I-213s as being arrested without warrants or subject to field warrants for whom you've not been provided arrest documentation. Our understanding is that most (if not all of those individuals) had pre-existing warrants for their arrest and the narrative section of the I-213 is incorrect to the extent that it states otherwise. If we determine that there was not a pre-existing arrest warrant for any of those individuals, we will update you (and will provide an updated certification, to the extent necessary). And we will, of course, provide you with the relevant arrest documentation for all of those individuals pursuant to our obligation to respond to specific requests under the May 12 Order. We are still determining whether to provide an updated certification given the above. Once we have reviewed the documentation for all of the individuals, we will let you know.
