In the first half of 2025, the ACLU of Colorado worked tirelessly alongside partners and community members to fight back against the dismantling of civil liberties at all levels of the government, with some of the largest threats coming at the federal level.

Our organization defended our state's immigrant communities through litigation to protect Coloradans from the Trump administration's extreme anti-immigrant agenda, including by challenging Immigration and Customs Enforcement's (ICE) bond denial policy and the agency's warrantless arrests.

We also strengthened voter protection laws, continued efforts to place privacy safeguards on emerging technologies, and secured a settlement on behalf of Danielle SeeWalker, a Húŋkpapȟa Lakȟóta artist, and more.
